SUBJECT INDEX

This index cites the collections in this volume under subject headings intended to characterize their principal contents. The basis for the assignment of headings was the information supplied by the repository, not examination of the collections themselves. Citations consist of the main entry, the title, and the card number. In the main list each entry appears sequentially according to this number, which is given in its lower right corner.

The Subject Heading System. The subject headings used in this index are taken from Subject Headings Used in the Dictionary Catalogs of the Library of Congress, (6th ed., 1957), its cumulative supplements, and the subject authority cards filed in the Official Catalog of the Library of Congress. The principles employed in the construction and application of these headings are, in brief, the selection of terms in common American usage and the assignment of the most specific heading or headings characterizing the work as a whole, or its principal content if it is of composite character.¹

In general, a subject heading denotes a topic, e. g., FUR TRADE. It may, however, denote a category of material, not material about the subject named in the heading, e. g., REGISTERS OF BIRTHS, ETC. Headings may take one of several forms, the more common being a single noun, AGRICULTURE; a noun with adjectival modification, RURAL ELECTRIFICATION, or MERCHANTS, AMERICAN; or a phrase, SLAVERY IN THE U. S. Headings may be followed by a subdivision denoting a category or type of material, —CORRESPONDENCE, REMINISCENCES, ETC., or a subtopic, —SOCIAL LIFE AND CUSTOMS. Further subdivision by historical period is common, —1815-1861, —20TH CENTURY.

Geographic and political areas appear both as the first element in a heading, when regarded as the primary focus of the subject, and as a subdivision under a topic, when the topic is regarded as primary. Examples are, respectively, MEXICO—HISTORY and RAILROADS—VIRGINIA. When place names are used as subdivisions, the entry may go directly to the locality, as in PLANTATIONS—ABERDEEN, MISS. or indirectly through the state or country in which the smaller locality is found, as in FARM LIFE—PENNSYLVANIA—ABINGTON.

In assigning headings for names of professions and occupations, e. g., AUTHORS, it has not been an objective to provide in the subject index a directory of the members of an occupational group represented by material in this catalog. In general such headings are assigned to collections containing material relating to a number of members of the profession or occupation, whether named or unnamed. They are also commonly used when no more strictly topical heading can be assigned. In both cases the heading is usually followed by the form subdivision, —CORRESPONDENCE, REMINISCENCES, ETC.

Collections consisting of or containing the records of a business firm, society, institution, etc., are entered under a heading appropriate to its nature or activity, e. g., BANKS AND BANKING, POLITICAL CLUBS. These headings are generally not traced on the main entry.

The subdivision —SOURCES perhaps calls for particular comment, because it may at first be regarded as applicable to the larger part of the collections represented in this catalog. In principle the distinction between, for example, CORNELL UNIVERSITY—HISTORY and CORNELL UNIVERSITY—HISTORY—SOURCES is that the first is used for a history of the university and the second for materials constituting sources for a history of the university.

It should be borne in mind that the subject entries were intended originally to permit the cards to be interfiled with subject entries for other materials in the complex catalogs of large research libraries. Use of the headings assigned in accordance with the established system permitted many economies in the preparation of the subject index for this catalog and also anticipated the potential future requirements of its expansion. A consequence, however, is that in some cases certain subdivisions, particularly of "form" character, establish distinctions that could have been foregone for the purposes of this index. On the other hand, the precision of such a heading as BOSTON—COMMERCE—INDIA, even though followed by only one citation, establishes direct access to relevant material that is not revealed by the typically non-descriptive titles of collections of manuscripts.

Indexing of Names. Names of persons and corporate bodies appear in this index if the assigned subject heading consists of the name followed by a subject subdivision, e. g.,

LINCOLN, ABRAHAM, PRES. U. S.—ASSASSINATION
MISSISSIPPI—GOVERNORS

In the case of a personal name, a citation to the same collection also appears under the person's name in the name index.

Citations under a corporate name in the subject index are not repeated in the name index, but that index may contain additional citations, e. g.,

References. See references from synonyms and alternative forms are provided: WEAPONS see FIREARMS; INTERNATIONAL ARBITRATION see ARBITRATION, INTERNATIONAL.

Certain see references of recurrent nature are given in abbreviated form. For example, the reference

ALEXANDRIA, VA.—DRUG TRADE [LAWYERS, ETC.]
see

DRUG TRADE [LAWYERS, ETC.]—ALEXANDRIA, VA.

is to be understood as meaning that Alexandria, Va., appears as a place subdivision under DRUG TRADE, LAWYERS, and other designations of occupations and professions. The same kind of ellipsis is illustrated by the reference

AMERICAN ARTISTS [AUTHORS, COMPOSERS, ETC.]
see

ARTISTS, [AUTHORS, COMPOSERS, ETC.] AMERICAN

Representative examples of the kind of see also references provided will be found under such headings as BOSTON, FAIRS, and LIBRARIES.

References are not provided between a general topic and its more specific elements; for example, from the name of a war to the name of one of its battles. Accordingly, for material on the Civil War (U. S.—HISTORY—CIVIL WAR) the names of battles should be searched also. Conversely, collections entered under the heading for the Civil War are presumptive sources for material on the Battle of Gettysburg (GETTYSBURG, BATTLE OF). Similarly, additional material relating to POETS will be found in the collections entered under AUTHORS.

Filing Arrangement. The subject headings are arranged word by word, proceeding in the order of the alphabet, letter by letter to the end of each word. A simple heading is filed preceding its subdivisions and the same heading followed by qualifications or extensions of any kind. In order to effect certain useful groupings, however, deviations from alphabetical arrangement are occasionally employed. The most common instances are:

1. When the same word appears (a) as the surname of a person, (b) as the name of a place, and (c) as the name of a thing, the entries appear in this order.

WASHINGTON, GEORGE, PRES. U. S.
WASHINGTON (STATE)
WASHINGTON, D. C.
WASHINGTON, TREATY OF
WASHINGTON ARCH, NEW YORK (CITY)

2. When the subdivisions of a given heading are of different kinds, the most common deviation from strict alphabetical arrangement observed in this index is the placing of geographical subdivisions in a separate block following the subdivisions for subtopics and categories.

INDIANS OF NORTH AMERICA
—ANTIQUITIES
—CIVILIZATION
—WARS
—ALABAMA
—VIRGINIA

3. Chronological arrangement is used for the designations of periods under the subdivision —HISTORY, whether the designation is by name or by dates. The chronological arrangement follows the opening date of the periods. Where several periods beginning with the same date are used, the most inclusive period comes first and is followed by the others in the order of inclusiveness.

PREFACE

This volume represents another step toward achieving bibliographical control over the vast manuscript resources of American repositories. It contains reproductions of cards for nearly 7,300 manuscript collections, issued by the Library of Congress during 1959, 1960, and 1961, thus making the accumulated information readily available to scholars and repositories everywhere. Access to the wealth of information in this volume is afforded by indexes to the names and subjects covered by the collections and the repositories where they are housed.

Preparation of the National Union Catalog of Manuscript Collections was made possible by a generous grant from the Council on Library Resources, Inc. These funds infused life into the emerging plans of the Library by underwriting the costs of the project. Thanks are due also to the members of the national advisory committee, whose advice and criticism guided the formulation of essential policies and procedures. Most important of all, however, was the contribution made by the hundreds of repositories that reported their holdings. Without their cooperation, this volume could never have been compiled. It is hoped that other manuscript repositories will join them in helping the Library of Congress to achieve a complete National Union Catalog of Manuscript Collections.

INTRODUCTION

History. Neither the need nor the desire for a national union catalog of manuscript collections is new. Scholars, particularly in the field of American history, have long been frustrated by the difficulties of locating specific manuscripts and even of identifying repositories that may contain source materials. At best these difficulties have meant delay in completing important research; at worst, they have resulted in disturbing gaps in the reconstruction of the past.

The background of early efforts to achieve bibliographical control over manuscripts can be found in the reports of the Committee on Historical Source Materials in the Annual Reports of the American Historical Association. Its Special Committee on Manuscripts, established in 1939, and the Joint Committee on Manuscripts, formed by the Society of American Archivists and the American Association for State and Local History in 1949, were among the first groups to give close attention to planning a workable project.

In 1951 the Library of Congress began to plan actively for a National Union Catalog of Manuscript Collections intended to parallel its catalogs of printed works. These early explorations have been described by Robert H. Land in "The National Union Catalog of Manuscript Collections," in the American Archivist, 17: 195-207 (July 1954). These plans remained unrealized, however, until November 29, 1958, when the Library received a $200,000 grant from the Council on Library Resources, Inc., to underwrite the primary costs of the project.

In the next few months events moved quickly. The Manuscripts Section was created in the Descriptive Cataloging Division and its staff was recruited. An advisory committee of nationally prominent scholars representing learned societies and other groups concerned with the preservation and control of manuscripts was appointed. And soon reports were being gathered from repositories all over the country. The first card in the new manuscripts series was printed in June 1959 and the long-awaited project was under way. The transitional phase, planning to operation, has been described by David C. Mearns in College and Research Libraries, 20: 341-346 (Sept. 1959). The work leading to the present volume is recounted in an article by Lester K. Born in the Spring 1962 issue of Manuscripts.

Purpose. This volume is intended to aid the scholar in his quest for manuscripts that may substantively advance his research. It describes nearly 7,300 manuscript collections located in about 400 repositories in the United States. The information about the collections is given as it appears on catalog cards prepared by the Manuscripts Section of the Descriptive Cataloging Division and issued by the Library of Congress in 1959, 1960, and 1961.

Scope. So extensive are the manuscript holdings in the United States that the effort to catalog them could hardly have been undertaken without limiting the definition of a manuscript collection. Therefore repositories have been asked to report only collections that conform to the following criteria:

A large group of papers (manuscript or typescript, originals, or copies, of letters, memoranda, diaries, accounts, log books, drafts, etc., including associated printed or near-print materials), usually having a common source and formed by or around an individual, a family, a corporate entity, or devoted to a single theme. Small groups consisting of a highly limited number of pieces should not be reported as collections in themselves but should be taken care of by more inclusive reports covering many such groups, either by an entry under an appropriate theme, if possible, or by a general entry for the miscellaneous (residual) collection of the repository. In many instances such small groups can be noted in the description of the scope and content of the larger artificial "collection" so devised for cataloging purposes.

To be eligible within this definition, a collection must be located in a public or quasi-public repository that regularly admits researchers. No limitations have been imposed on the time, place of origin, or nature of the collection. The advisory committee recommended two further qualifications to the basic criteria:

1. Archives were not cataloged if located where one might expect to find them; for example, county records in a county courthouse. However, the catalog does include private manuscripts in archival repositories and archival records found outside the normal archival repository.

2. Collections consisting entirely of photocopies and transcripts of original manuscripts located in the United States were generally excluded. Exceptions were made when the repository holding the originals does not regularly admit researchers or when the collection of copies was created from original manuscripts scattered in several repositories.

The information about the collections came from various sources: data sheets specially prepared by the repositories, copies of their catalog cards, and entries in published guides to their collections. Since the time available for cataloging manuscripts varies from institution to institution, the descriptions differ with respect to completeness and detail. Moreover, the total holdings of large repositories may not always be reported completely and the collections of some repositories are not represented at all. These limitations are inevitable in a project that must depend on the cooperation of repositories to obtain the necessary data. Nevertheless, this volume is a substantial beginning to the herculean labor of cataloging manuscript resources in the United States.

Entries. The collections represented in this volume have been described according to the Rules for Descriptive Cataloging in the Library of Congress: Manuscripts (preliminary edition, 1954). As these rules are based on standard rules for author and title entry and description, the entries resemble those for published materials. The elements are as follows:

1. Main entry: When a collection or group of papers consists of material written by or addressed to a person, family, government agency or other corporate body, it is entered under the appropriate name. Any other collection is entered under the name of the collector (person, family, or corporate body) if it is ascertainable. If neither of the foregoing choices is possible, the collection is entered under title, using the name by which it is known or, if there is none, a title supplied by the cataloger.

2. Title: the name by which the collection is known or a brief title supplied by the cataloger; inclusive dates of the manuscripts are given.

3. Physical description: given in terms of items, linear feet of shelf space, reels or feet of microfilm, or in other suitable terms. Notation is made of the form of the manuscripts if they are not original.

4. Location: the name of the repository where the collection is housed.

5. Scope and content: This note describes the types and groups of papers and documents in the collection, noting their subject matter and the names of the principal persons and corporate bodies with whom they deal, and mentioning other special features of the collection. For personal papers, the note includes characterizing biographical data.

6. Other information (when available): references to published and unpublished descriptions of the collection; restrictions on access; literary rights; and provenance.

The subject index entries chosen for each collection are given at the end of its description. They were selected after careful consideration of the information supplied by the repository, not on the basis of examination of the original manuscripts. The entries were taken from Subject Headings Used in the Dictionary Catalogs of the Library of Congress (6th ed., 1957) and its supplements. They were assigned according to the policies and practices governing their use with printed materials. In brief, these are to assign the most specific heading characterizing the content of the work as a whole. Since many of the manuscript collections recorded in this catalog contain materials on a variety of topics or in several categories, more than one heading is assigned to a collection if required to provide access to its principal contents.

Arrangement. Each entry for a manuscript collection in this volume is arranged in sequence by the number in its lower right corner. This number was assigned when the catalog card was printed in the annual LC card series for 1959, 1960, and 1961. Access to specific information about the collections is made possible by three finding aids given at the end of the volume:

1. A name index citing more than 30,000 persons and corporate bodies mentioned in the collections.

2. A subject index citing the collections under their appropriate subjects. More than 3,000 main subject headings are given. Observations on the construction of the subject index with suggestions for its use will be found immediately preceding the index itself.

3. A repository index citing the collections under the names of the repositories where they may be found. In all, nearly 400 repositories are listed.

All citations in these indexes include the card number by which the description of the collection may be found in the numerically arranged main list.

Continuation. The work brought to fruition in this volume is being continued at the Library of Congress and the publication of additional volumes of this catalog is contemplated. It is expected that, in the future, entries for newly cataloged collections will be published in volumes separate from the indexes; the latter will be issued in cumulative form. Thus the latest index volume will serve as a complete guide to all volumes of the catalog.

The indexes of this first volume are to be regarded as in some degree experimental. Changes proposed as a result of the examination and use of this volume will be carefully considered for adoption.

Inquiries. Questions about the organization and content of this volume should be addressed to the Descriptive Cataloging Division, which had editorial responsibility for its preparation.

EXPLANATION OF CERTAIN MARKS AND SYMBOLS USED IN THE ENTRIES

Examples

1. Education—U. S.

i. Lee, Arthur, 1740-1792.

Immediately below the physical description and any notes concerning the collection are listed the subjects encompassed within it (preceded by Arabic numerals) and the names of persons and corporate entities most prominently identified with it (preceded by Roman numerals). These terms, including "Title," are used in preparing headings for cards in library catalogs, and indicate that entries will appear in such catalogs under the title, etc.

The number assigned to each card for identification, ordering, and stocking purposes appears in the lower right corner of each entry. Cards may be ordered from the Card Division most economically by this card number. It consists of a distinguishing abbreviation, designating a special series, followed by a prefix (the last two digits of the year the card was printed) and a serial number. "Rev.," "Rev. 2," etc., indicate revision of the original entry.

Many repositories are participating in the creation of the National Union Catalog of Manuscript Collections. The name of the contributing repository appears in the lower left corner of the entry.
